

Jeremy Brunaccioni

Gill, MA

June 5, 2012

Dear DOER,

I'm making this letter short, as I'm annoyed this even has to be pointed out. Biomass plants are not a clean and renewable source of energy. They are a type of incinerator that releases particulates into the air. They in fact pollute. It doesn't matter that they may pollute less than other types of plants, they still pollute. I do not want my hard earned tax dollars helping to subsidize biomass plants but would rather you work on truly renewable and environmentally forms of energy.

Sincerely,

J. Brunaccioni